ADMIRAL SAMPSON

North Atlantic Squadron.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.-At the conlusion of the Dewey celebration in This action is to be taken at the request of the admiral, who has already had much more than his portion of sea service in his grade. After a short leave of absence he will be assigned to shore duty, probably in command of one of the navy yards.

In close touch are two offices on Blackstone row, the tenants having miral Sampson's successor as comman- talkentive, ceurulous turn, and innocent one of the navy yards.

In considering the selection of Admiral Sampson's successor as commander in chief of the North Atlantic station, the navy department has practically narrowed the field down to two names. It has been laid down as the policy to be followed that the commands of fleets and stations shall be reserved wherever practicable for the nine rear admirals of the first grade. It has been found that of these officers who are not already on sea service or about to retire shortly, there are three names—Remey, in command at Portsmouth: Farquhar, commandant at Norfolk, and Schley, president of the reliring board. Farquhar has been longest on continuous shore duty, and it is indicated here that either he or Remey is to succeed Sampson.

The trials a fledging lawyer encoun ers are few in one sense and many in another, while he is in the embryonic stage. Further up the street young Brown waits through the long days for clients, the meanwhile masticating scrap and ruminating on the disappointments in life. His hungry eyes, however, filled with a rejuv-enated light one day this week as a man walked into his office and sough a slice of Brown's legal lore. It was like a drop of dew to a parched tongue and Brown was the most willing servant in pulling down his new code to consult the necessary passage. While the client stated the circumstances of PITTSBURGH. I'd advise you to drop it."

There was murder in Brown's eye and fire in his cheek. Smith continued to launch his information forth, while the client looked uneasily from one young lawyer to the other. He was somewhat confused, and was starting for the door when poor Brown yelled, "Hold on!"

In spite of Brown's pathetic entreatles, however, the visitor beat a retreat remarking that he would call again. Then Brown, beaten out of his plunks, started for Smith, but the latter, all unconscious of the havoc he created, had disappeared in the hall way, and fearing to create a scene the discomfited Brown was cheated out of his revenge. Smith is wondering now at the coolness of Brown's salu-

Thirty-seven true bills were returned and in twenty-two cases no bills were found. This action of the grand jury in turning loose twenty-two of the men under arrest left no excuse for a motion for a change of venue and no motion of that kind was made, although contemplated at first by the defense. The trial of the various parties arranged in groups of five will continue every day and svening until the whole list is finished.
